Why you are here?

If you are here, it means you are ready to begin a journey with us, to make an investment in yourself. Move Over Mountain sees the end goal of this path as the acquisition of a stable and fruitful career path, but the growth we seek to inspire does not end there. We are not here to build successful workers, but human beings. Enrollment in our program is just as much about career skills as life skills and we acknowledge gainful employment as an important component of a stable and prosperous life but not the end means necessarily, for our mission is about successful lives.

With that in mind, it doesn't matter where you come from or what you carry when you come to us, so much that you are ready to make this investment both in the things we have to teach you and in yourself. This is a place of progression, self-empowerment and hope but the first step to any process is engagement. We aren't offering any patented promises or methods, because there are no easy shortcuts, but we will show you how to manage your time and how to leverage this towards your goals, whatever they may be. It is our mission/passion to cultivate an environment where this can happen but it will be your desire that drives this change. We know this journey will be filled with challenges, as difficult as they are rewarding, confusing as they are profound, but we promise you that this is not one you will make alone.

Why we are here?

Our interest is in helping you discover and grow into a successful, dynamic person with the hope we can inspire you to do the same. We seek to understand what is relevant for society today and in making you relevant for that tomorrow. But that is only the beginning, just as this organization was born out of the selfless actions of others, so we hope to inspire in you a similar confidence and empowerment towards positive change. The path to success is just as much about what is given back, which is why our curriculum instills specific business skills for employment along with overarching personal development. Change is always difficult which is why we offer an environment that is safe and fosters learning via experimentation, observation and actualization. Goals are not reached via a patented track, but rather a dynamic path, but we will help you walk it as best we can. It is our promise that we will be there to walk beside you when you need a companion, in front when you need a guide and behind you when you need a push.
